Should Patients Be Allowed to “Pay To Play” in Clinical Research?

Thursday
September 24, 2015
12:00 - 1:00 p.m.

Aresty Conference Room LG 503/504
Norris Research Tower
1450 Biggy Street, Los Angeles

With the greater difficulty that investigators face in finding funding for biomedical research, is it time to allow research institutions to charge patients who want to participate in clinical trials? Would that support trials that might not otherwise be conducted or would it undermine research integrity and distort the selection of subjects?

Facilitator
Alexander Capron, Director, Research Ethics, SC-CTSI
Professor of Medicine and Law, Keck School of Medicine of USC

Learn more & RSVP by clicking on the following link: "Pay to Play"

Presented by the Workforce Development Core of the Southern California Clinical and Translational Science Institute (WD, SC CTSI)