This symposium provides a didactic review of several common and uncommon entities including various imaging techniques, imaging practices and interventions. Each topic is presented in a didactic, lecture format, followed by questions and answers. The course attempts to address many of the changes in current imaging trends, and address current trends in abdominal, thoracic, musculoskeletal and neuro radiology. Radiology interventions will include current recommendations for use of blood products in the setting of abdominal pathology.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Demonstrate new and innovative radiology imaging techniques related to the treatment of prostate enlargement.
- Discuss current recommendations on use of blood products involving radiology procedures.
- Explain new cutting edge application in MRI, CT and US, related to liver, thyroid and bowel.
- Identify the most recent advances in tomosynthesis.
- Discuss image acquisition and measurements for TAVR.

TARGET AUDIENCE

This course is intended for radiologists in academic and private practice and other allied healthcare professionals seeking to enhance their understanding of radiology and treatment options in order to select the optimal management for their patients.
